ALPEREN ZEKI GOKMEN

Clips from your live sessions and podcast

Each new live session or podcast comes back as a shortlist of moments, then as finished vertical clips for you to check. You choose the moments and approve the clips. The agent does the cutting.

Sample: prepared for Mira Lahti, a made-up client

21 October 2026 · AI Builder & Educator, Helsinki · alperenzekigokmen.com

Where you are today

- You record a 60-minute live session every week and a podcast every other week.
- You cut the clips yourself on Sundays. You put it at 3 to 6 hours a week, so most weeks nothing gets posted.
- You've tried ChatGPT or Claude in a chat. I'm assuming that helped with the words, but the watching and cutting stayed with you.
- I'm assuming you post mostly on Instagram, since that's where you found me.

What the agent does

1. When a new live session or podcast episode lands, the agent reads its transcript from start to finish.
2. It picks the moments that make sense on their own. Each one gets a start time, a hook and a one-line reason.
3. You get that shortlist and tick the moments you want cut.
4. It cuts each ticked moment as a vertical clip, with captions in your colors and a post caption in your words.
5. You watch each clip, fix it or drop it, and post the ones you like.

Example draft, names made up

Clip 3 of 6, from this week's live session

Moment	23:41 to 24:38, 57 seconds.
Hook on screen	"Your clients don't need more advice. They need one next step."
Why this one	Sanna asked how to stop overloading clients. Your answer is complete in under a minute, and nobody needs the rest of the session to follow it.
Post caption	"The fastest way to lose a client is to give them ten things to do. Give them one. Then ask what got in the way."
Check	Sanna's name is said at 23:44. Keep it or cut it?

What you still decide

- Which moments get cut, from the agent’s shortlist.
- Every finished clip and caption, before anything posts.
- What stays private: client names, their stories, anything said in confidence.
- How often you post, and where.

If you go ahead: how we set it up

This plan is free and yours to keep. Setting it up is paid work, at the fixed price of the option you pick below.

This week

We talk about your week

A 30-minute call. We go through one recent live session and one podcast episode. We look at where your recordings end up, where you post, and what a good clip looks like to you.

Weeks 1 to 2

I prepare your team

I write your brief: your clip length, your colors, how you write captions and what never gets clipped. Then I prepare the agents and a plain guide. The technical side is mine.

Weeks 2 to 3

We set it up together

On your computer, in your own accounts. The clip agent’s first job is your latest live session, so you see real clips from your own work on day one.

Weeks 4 to 6

You run it. I stay close

You run it on each new recording. After your first weeks I check in and fix what’s off: moments it keeps missing, captions that don’t sound like you.

Your options

Your AI team, set up with you

Your fixed quote

My pick for you. Your recordings come in every week, so the clip work repeats. It fits your budget, and it can be running within your month.

- Three to five agents, starting with clips from your live session and podcast
- Your brief: your clip style, your colors, and what you alone approve
- A plain guide, so you can add the next agent yourself
- A check-in once it runs, to fix what's off

One working session

Your fixed quote

A smaller first step: we take one recent recording and work out together how far ChatGPT or Claude can take your clip work.

- Bring one recent live session and what you've already tried in a chat
- We work on it together, on your screen
- A short recap of what we did and what to do next

What it won’t do

- It doesn’t post on its own. Every clip waits for your yes.
- It only works with what you said on the recording. It won’t film, script or add new content.
- It can’t rescue a recording with poor sound or a frozen screen.
- It flags names and personal stories, but you decide what’s okay to share from a live session.

Want one written for your own week? It’s free, and it commits you to nothing.

Get my free plan